Talking With Your Kids About Money

marthaadamsmedia.com

Have you ever found yourself feeling that in some way, your kids simply don't get it when it comes to money? You're definitely not alone! It's this feeling of frustration because they don't see it or perhaps don't appreciate it the way you do. As though they live in another world, and they don't connect with your perspective? That's exactly why I've designed this interactive activity for you! This will help guide a meaningful conversation that helps develop and nurture an ongoing line of communication. Here, we create connection through context by mimicking a lived financial experience. In this activity, your child(ren) will experience what it can mean to manage money in the world. Simply follow the step-by-step instructions included.

Let's get started!

INSTRUCTIONS:

1. Print this activity
2. Have a pair of scissors handy
3. Have a pen handy
4. Cut the expense chits along the dotted line
5. Place the expense chits in order in an envelope (starting with the Canada Revenue Agency income tax cost)
6. Have a little box or container handy to collect the chits

* Numbers are as of 2022 Toronto Canada Averages

* Please note that some numbers have been rounded up for ease of activity use for your family.
